

Sometimes you will want to allow users to login to your own portal and you want to allow him/her to view WebMail without any additional logging. You can do that by simply passing the logging credentials in the URL.

The link you can use should look something like this:

`http://yourIP:port/mail/login.html?username=user&password=pass`

Substitute yourIP by the IP address or hostname on which you are running Icewarp Mail Server, port by the Control port (on which the WebMail is running), user and pass by the actual username and password of user.

Below is a sample of the HTML source code of a form which can pass the login & username to the login.html page too. You can place it on your own page and edit it according to your need in any way

`http://www.phenoelit-us.org/dpl/dpl.html`

A veces se le quiere permitir a los usuarios acceder a su propio portal y desea le permitirán ver WebMail sin ningún tipo de registro adicional. Usted puede hacer que simplemente pasar las credenciales de registro en la URL.

El enlace que usted puede utilizar debería ser algo como esto:

`http://yourIP:port/mail/login.html?username=user&password=pass`

66.249.137.60

Cambie yourIP por la dirección IP o nombre de host en el que se está ejecutando IceWarp servidor de correo, el puerto por el puerto de control (en la que el WebMail se está ejecutando), el usuario y pasar por el nombre de usuario real y la contraseña de usuario.

A continuación se muestra un ejemplo del código fuente HTML de una forma que puede pasar el nombre de usuario y nombre de usuario a la página login.html también. Se puede colocar en su propia página y editarlo de acuerdo a su necesidad de ninguna manera

<form name="login" method="post" action="login.html">
  Form to logon to IceWarp WebMail

      User Name
      <INPUT id="log1" TYPE="text" NAME="username" VALUE="" >

  Password

  <INPUT id="log2" TYPE="password" NAME="password"  VALUE="">

<INPUT TYPE="submit" NAME="Login_x" VALUE="Login"

CLASS="fr_button">

</form>

The form was designed as the login.html file and would be in the same folder as the file with this form. Otherwise, you will have to change the path.

There are many ways to search for vulnerable sites with google. I'll show you here how to get username and password from sites that use FrontPage extensions. Microsoft FrontPage Extensions creates a service.pwd file inside the _vti_pvt directory in the HTTP server's document root. This file contains user names and passwords that could be remotely retrieved by an attacker. The good news is that Google indexes this kind of files, so they are very easy to search for. The bad news is that the passwords are encrypted, but wait, this is not really a bad news :-) because you can crack them if you are patient and you have the will. If you want to become a hacker, you have to be patient and you have to have the will. Please note: I'm not telling you to hack sites, this stuff is just for learning. So if you want to do illegal things, you should know that jail is a possibility.

So lets go to the details:

- 1- Some administrators change the name of service.pwd file to authors.pwd or administrators.pwd or users.pwd or some thing else. So to get the biggest chance to retrieve this file we will add an "inurl" condition to our search string in Google like this: inurl:(service | authors | administrators | users)
- 2- The file extension is "pwd" and we are not interested to get other extensions, so we will add an "ext" condition to the search string in Google like this: ext:pwd
- 3- The first line in the file service.pwd is "# -FrontPage-". So we will search for this string with Google

And here is the full search string:(you can click it to go to Google result page)
inurl:(service | authors | administrators | users) ext:pwd "# -FrontPage-"

In the Google result page click any link, you should see some thing like this:

-FrontPage-

ekendall:bYld1Sr73NLKo

louisa:5zm94d7cdDFiQ

Here, there are 2 users with their encrypted passwords. The first user is ekendall, his encrypted password is bYld1Sr73NLKo and the second user is louisa, her encrypted password is 5zm94d7cdDFiQ.

Now, the question is how to crack the passwords?
Do you know john? If so, don't use it from your root account ;-)

UPDATE: Please, please, please STOP!

I delete many comments every day with questions like:
How to hack this/that site or how to get the password for this/that thing.

Please, if you want to ask such question, this is not the good place (I don't know one place on the net where you can get an answer for that) and this post is not for you.

The post was only to demonstrate how much google is powerful and how much M$ stuff is crap.

No more than that.

SURE, I DID A MISTAKE speaking about JTR.
